Shawn Vernier, author of technical aspects of this site. This site would not exist if it was not for the free use of many, many technologies from many developers via many more hours of google searching. Thus I provide a copy of this entire site (minus some files and photos) for download as source code for use in future projects under the MIT Open Source License. I hope someone finds this useful in the future. I'm not a hard person to track down should you have questions either.
